

Mom's Club
by Annam Manthiram

After her husband left her, Devaki tried to join a club for mothers.

"You can't participate unless you have a child," they said.

At the next meeting, she brought a plastic bag. Devaki showed the women the bloody outline shaped like a tadpole. That was enough to grant her admission.